"I'm delighted to welcome One York as an official event partner," stated JWA Team Principal, James Watt. "The appeal of the Le Mans Series and the Aston Martin Racing brand are exceptional and I'm extremely happy that our involvement with both has attracted the attention of such an exciting and aspirational development as One York. The Le Mans Series and sports car racing's global appeal is only growing stronger and we're excited to be able to engage world-class businesses through our on-track activities. We're looking forward to hosting One York as we look ahead to a full-time campaign with the Aston Martin Vantage GT2 in 2009."

One York's Charles Darwish, Principal, commented; "One York is a spectacular New York residence so it's only fitting that we promote it through a platform with similar appeal. The Le Mans Series is undoubtedly a leader in the field of sports car competition and JWA's decision to compete with the Aston Martin Vantage GT2 proved equally desirable as we feel there's a great deal of synergy between our respective brands. One York is a celebration of excellence and there's no doubt that the mention of Aston Martin Racing conjures up the same sense of design, detail and luxury. We're delighted to be partnering with JWA. Europe is a key territory for our marketing activities and our engagement with JWA marks an exciting time in our promotional strategy and is another a great example of Anglo-American partnerships working together."

The One York-backed JWA #93 Aston Martin Vantage GT2 will be raced this weekend in the ultra-competitive GT2 class of the Le Mans Series by Tim Sugden (GBR), Alan van der Merwe (SA) and Michael Outzen (DK).
